Yes it's a little over an hour from my house. They posted several pics on FB. We have been waiting for this for a long time.

I wonder if they will have the machines paying good right now to suck us in?

Kim, is this the casino that was closed down and has been in litigation? Where is it located in Texas?

Used to travel through there quite often. Maybe this is the start of more TX casinos? Fingers crossed for a long honeymoon period for you once it opens!

Yes that's the one. The address is Livingston, TX. That's the closest town. That screen shot was from their Facebook page.

Kim this sounds like a small Class 2 Bingo style machine set-up. Hope you like it or learn to tolerate it for when you need to scratch the gambling itch. I stopped going to the one here in Madison, WI cause it is to frustrating. I have a lot of Class 3 casinos within 2 hours so I would rather play at one of them. Good Luck if you go & tell DH that this Packers Fan says hey.

Yes that's exactly what it is. From the pics they posted on FB it looks like they have crowded the machines very close together. So we will see. I'm hoping they have some red screen machines since it seems that people do well on those. We consider Coushatta our home casino and that's over 3 hours away with the ones in Lake Charles just a little closer. So hopefully it will be a fun place to spend a couple hours every now and then.

I will tell him for sure !

Kim, I never went there when it was open before, but I know of people who did. There were times you had to wait outside just to go in and then if you wanted to play a machine you just about had to play whatever no one was playing at the time. I hope they get the OK to enlarge it and make it bigger.

I never went there before either. I'm sure it will be very crowded. We called and they said they are open 24/7 but NO alcohol so maybe that will discourage some people. I hope so!

A new casino in Texas!

Ok this place is open now and went up to check it out this morning.

It is super, super small, but nice. You walk right in and get your card and it opens into the non-smoking room. Some doors open into the smoking room which I think is backwards because people will come in smoking.

The machines are all clones of ones we know. 88 fortunes, Mustang Money, China Shores(ish), MooLaLa, etc. Most with slightly different names. Some poker machines and high limit reels. I played the dollar reels hoping that they were red screen machines (I couldn't tell), but I never got more than a cherry.

We won a little and then played it all back - so typical trip. There is a free coke/coffee station and an in house restaurant that we didn't try.

It's just an 1:15 from my house so it will be a fun place for an evening out or a short

Sunday morning trip like today

Here's one pic from a bonus

Thanks Kim, I use to go years ago. I don't like the drive on 59, once out of Houston though it's a nice ride. Was it crowded at the time you went?

When I want fun I go to a casino....Nothing like a cock, slot and a handy!!

No, we went very early this morning and it was almost empty. The new Grand Parkway runs right by my neighborhood so we jumped on that and got to 59 really quick so it was an easy drive. But 59 through town is awful, I agree.

Thanks Brandon, I think so to, but I forgot to look at the brand. I tried them just a bit but never even got a line hit. When I looked at the pays it only showed the bingo patterns, so I wasn't sure.

VGT wasn't one of the manufacturers that I heard they have... I did hear they have some Castle Hill Gaming <http://www.castlehillgaming.com/> Castle Hill Gaming was started by some ex VGT folks and the games look very similar. Not sure how similar they play, but I would guess pretty close.

No we got there about 7. We were up early and wanted to see it without a crowd.

A red screen is the bonus feature in those VGT class 2 machines we play in Oklahoma.

Thanks @Warren . That's the ones they have. I forgot to look at manufacturers but I will next time.

It's interesting they were allowed to reopen, but I probably wouldn't go. I'm not a fan of Class II bingo machines anyways. Can't wait to hear how they do though in the first few months.

A new casino in Texas!

Alabama Coushatta Tribe of Texas added 8 new photos.

The Tribe is pleased to announce Naskila Entertainment has opened its doors for business. It will be a soft opening to help train the employees with a planned Grand Opening for June 2. There are 365 electronic bingo machines, with a full service restaurant named Timbers Grille. There will be over 200 high quality jobs with a capacity of 777 individuals.

We never really thought this would happen!
This is a little over an hour from my house.

Yes that's the one. The address is Livingston, TX. That's the closest town. That screen shot was from their Facebook page.

Kim this sounds like a small Class 2 Bingo style machine set-up. Hope you like it or learn to tolerate it for when you need to scratch the gambling itch. I stopped going to the one here in Madison, WI cause it is to frustrating. I have a lot of Class 3 casinos within 2 hours so I would rather play at one of them. Good Luck if you go & tell DH that this Packers Fan says hey.

Yes that's exactly what it is. From the pics they posted on FB it looks like they have crowded the machines very close together. So we will see. I'm hoping they have some red screen machines since it seems that people do well on those. We consider Coshatta our home casino and that's over 3 hours away with the ones in Lake Charles just a little closer. So hopefully it will be a fun place to spend a couple hours every now and then.

I will tell him for sure!

The screenshot shows a forum page with a festive, Christmas-themed header. The header includes the site name 'THE JOKER'S WILD GAMBLING EMPORIUM' and navigation links like 'Help', 'Register', 'Login', and 'Forgot Password'. Below the header, there's a navigation bar with 'What's New' and 'Forum' tabs. The main content area displays a thread titled 'A new casino in Texas!'. The thread starts with a welcome message for first-time visitors. The first post is by user 'Brandon', a Senior Member who joined in Nov 2015 from Longview, TX. He has 670 posts and says 'Good luck! Please report back, I am anxious to hear how it goes!'. The second post is by user 'peggy', also a Senior Member who joined in May 2015. She has 434 posts and says 'Kim, I never went there when it was open before, but I know of people who did. There were times you had to wait outside just to go in and then if you wanted to play a machine you just about had to play whatever no one was playing at the time. I hope they get the OK to enlarge it and make it bigger.' The third post is by user 'KimKyle', a Senior Member, who says 'Originally Posted by charlie50: Looks like it just north of Houston on the Trinity River ...365 Type II MACHINES ..Let us know how ya do @KimKyle..'. There were times you had to wait outside just to go in and then if you wanted to play a machine you just about had to play whatever no one was playing at the time. I hope they get the OK to enlarge it and make it bigger.

I never went there before either. I'm sure it will be very crowded. We called and they said they are open 24/7 but NO alcohol so maybe that will discourage some people. I hope so!

No alcohol means 18 year olds are welcome.

I hope not. We deal with 18 year olds at Winstar and it's a huge pain.

A new casino in Texas!

Ok this place is open now and went up to check it out this morning.

It is super, super small, but nice. You walk right in and get your card and it opens into the non-smoking room. Some doors open into the smoking room which I think is backwards because people will come in smoking.

The machines are all clones of ones we know. 88 fortunes, Mustang Money, China Shores(ish), MooLaLa, etc. Most with slightly different names. Some poker machines and high limit reels. I played the dollar reels hoping that they were red screen machines (I couldn't tell), but I never got more than a cherry.

We won a little and then played it all back - so typical trip. There is a free coke/coffee station and an in house restaurant that we didn't try.

It's just an 1:15 from my house so it will be a fun place for an evening out or a short

Sunday morning trip like today.

Here's one pic from a bonus

Thanks Kim, I use to go years ago. I don't like the drive on 59, once out of Houston though it's a nice ride. Was it crowded at the time you went?

When I want fun I go to a casino....Nothing like a cock, slot and a handy!!

No, we went very early this morning and it was almost empty. The new Grand Parkway runs right by my neighborhood so we jumped on that and got to 59 really quick so it was an easy drive. But 59 through town is awful, I agree.

Thanks Brandon, I think so to, but I forgot to look at the brand. I tried them just a bit but never even got a line hit. When I looked at the pays it only showed the bingo patterns, so I wasn't sure.

Early like 9:00am @KimKyle. Also, what is a red screen?

VGT wasn't one of the manufacturers that I heard they have... I did hear they have some Castle Hill Gaming <http://www.castlehillgaming.com/> Castle Hill Gaming was started by some ex VGT folks and the games look very similar. Not sure how similar they play, but I would guess pretty close.

No we got there about 7. We were up early and wanted to see it without a crowd.

A red screen is the bonus feature in those VGT class 2 machines we play in Oklahoma.

Thanks @Warren . That's the ones they have. I forgot to look at manufacturers but I will next time.

It's interesting they were allowed to reopen, but I probably wouldn't go. I'm not a fan of Class II bingo machines anyways. Can't wait to hear how they do though in the first few months.
